Success is the title that can be applied without any reservations to the engagement of the Giffen Company at the Academy. The week just closed was remarkable in its results considering the mere curfew-bounding temperature, and the company will start upon its fifth week of continuing throughout the summer. Mr. Giffen's players have "made good" in four widely different plays, and during the coming week will continue. In selecting "Diplomacy" one object that Mr. Giffen had in view was to prove that whatever might be given his players to do, they could do with entire credit to themselves and satisfaction to their admirers.

If asked to name one of the greatest dramatists the world has known since Shakespeare, the leading critic would name Victorien Sardou. Among the plays that have given him this proud distinction may be mentioned La Tosca, Fedora, Gismonda and Cleopatra, the plays that brought such fame and fortune to Fanny Davenport and his great effort, Robespierre, in which Henry Trivette rehabilitated his shattered fortunes in England and played with simply phenomenal success in this country during the past season. "Diplomacy" has stood since its first production as one of the greatest plays.

"Diplomacy" is one of Sardou's best known plays, and treats with all the raffishness for which he is so remarkable—a mass of political intrigue with a strong, pulsating love interest intermingled. In Countess Zlka Miss Fitz Allan will have the most important role she has yet portrayed, one full of dramatic interest and one that runs almost the whole historic gamut. It is a role well suited to Miss Fitz Allan's methods, and she should score the greatest success she has yet achieved. As Dora Miss Scott will also appear in a role requiring far more dramatic ability than the part she has played thus far have permitted her to show. The part of the great importance in the play's development, and in several strong scenes she is the central figure; in some the only one. That Miss Scott will give a conscientious, finished and effective performance can be taken for granted. Miss Reimer will step into a high comedy role, that of the Marquise de Rodrez, and Miss Wilcox will leave the maid for the mistress, appearing as Lady Henry Fairfax, a role that she will give out or more readily and give her several opportunities in other directions. As Mon, a French maid, and a good one as maids go, Miss Tessie Fairman will make her first appearance with the company. It is not improbable that she will give out or more readily and give her several opportunities in other directions. As Mon, a French maid, and a good one as maids go, Miss Tessie Fairman will make her first appearance with the company. It is not improbable that she will give out or more readily and give her several opportunities in other directions.

Lowell and Lowell, in their "Fun on a Bill Board," are grotesque comedy performers of the highest class. They are clever athletes, and as fun-misfits they have few equals. Swan and Rambard, comedians, vocalists and dancers, will serve a merry twenty-minute act, in which they promise to furnish healthy laughter. Misses Elliott and Alene, top-line comedians, promise a new style "sister act" that will please. The bill on paper certainly looks as strong as any Mr. Wells has offered, and it will no doubt serve to put the "standing room only" card on duty again.

On account of the work of improvement soon to be begun at the Bijou the sale of reserved seats has been transferred to Branch Allen's on Main Street, and to enable patrons to purchase tickets before reaching the theatre, general admission and reserved seats can be secured at Kirkwood's lunch room on Main Street.

Theatrical Amusements.

Duse is studying Shelly's Beatrice Cenci. Harry Comer will head one of the W. A. Brady productions next season. Corna Tanner is to appear in comic opera. "Moses" is the title of Perosi's new cantata. "Uncle Tom's Cabin" is to be produced in Paris.

Patricia Robertson's leading woman next season will be Gertrude Elliott. Milton Aborn made his vaudeville debut at Keith's, Boston, last week. Jeff D. English will next season a musical comedy by Charles Klein. David Henderson will next season manager a New York theatre. Basil Hood and Sir Arthur Sullivan are writing an Irish opera. Nance O'Neill is to appear in London. W. A. McConnell is now a vaudeville monologist.

A Finkelstein's comic opera, "The Pearl of India," will be discussed next season. "Moses" is to be acted next season. Pete Bailey will star in "Hodge, Podge & Co."

Mary Hampton is to be a member of Greenwald's Stock Company next season. "The Baroness," a new musical comedy, by Frank Pixley and Gustav Luder, was produced in Chicago last week. A great niece of Danton was in the audience that saw the revival of "Charlotte Corday" at the Theatre, Revue, and St. Henry Irving and Ellen Terry will return to the United States a year from next fall.

Walter E. Perkins, of "My Friend from India" fame, is to star in a dramatization of "Jerome, a Poor Man."

Marie Wainwright is to have a short play by Justin McCarthy, and in it she will enact two women, one of them a variety actress with a secret.

Dunne, of Dunne & Ryler, was formerly a typesetter. He is now playing the part of the "Colonel Who Licks Napoleon," a part that he created five years ago. A vivid representation of the burning of the Arc is being prepared for a drama, illumined stream and reflected flame are to make it thrilling to the beholder.

Lions, real and alive, were shown in the arena act of "Quo Vadis" as performed at Richmond. One of the various versions of the novel are still being used in the cut-rate throughout the country.

Eduard Strauss and his orchestra were a frost here a few years ago, but there has been such steady interest in his American appreciation of music—whether profound or popular—that the visit of the famous leader next autumn may be more successful.—Dramatic Mirror.

It is said that Sarah Bernhardt, in her tour of America with Compeh next season, will receive $1,000 for each performance and a percentage of the receipts above a certain amount. In addition, all her expenses will be paid.

Ben Croset has established an out-of-door theatre in the Botanical Gardens, London, and is giving Shakespeare's comedies in the open air by electric light. "A Midsummer-Night's Dream," "The Comedy of Errors," "Twelfth Night," "As You Like It," and "Love's Labor Lost," are in the repertory.

Tamagno has been here. His voice is as grand as ever. It is marvellous, in fact. Tamagno is an inveterate smoker, and his cigar is never out of his mouth except when he is singing. But from the moment he attends the first rehearsal of an opera to the last moment of the last performance of the opera, a cigar never touches his lips. But when he is singing, he takes a cigar and lights it hungry-like, and thereafter a cigar is always in his mouth.—Rome letter in Dramatic Mirror.

No little editorial comment has been evoked by R. F. Keith's principal gift theatre, to E. P. Albee. "These four enterprises," says the Boston Journal, represent a vast property created out of nothing in a dozen years by the genius of one man, and the loyal and intelligent co-operation of many, among whom Mr. Albee stands first. They give profitable employment to hundreds of men and women, pleasure to multitudes, and they do injury to none, for they have solved the problem of many, and even less than that, they have solved it in a way that is of every kind, and yet free from immorality, indecency, and even bad taste."

The fact that theatrical business does immensely, and when it does, pays immensely, has no better evidence in its favor than the great success of the Lieder Company, so called. There are only two people in the organization really, and they practically started on a shoe-string, two years ago. George Tyndal broke, was looking for somebody to put up money to do "The Christian," and he went all about New York trying to find it. Nobody believed Viola Allen could do it. Nobody thought the book could be made into a play. Yet, by pluck, determination, and, finally, good luck, he got there. Of course, we all know the hit that the piece made; and it led to other important things. The Lieder Company branched out into various spectacular affairs upon the strength of their original success, and I think only one fell by the way, and that was the "Children of the Ghetto," but even this hit, in this country, after its disaster in London. At any rate, what with James O'Neill and other things for which they put up honest money, the Lieder Company has made a profit of very nearly $5,000 a week; and, from the looks of things, their next year will be as good, for they put no less than twelve companies on the road, among others the Lieder Company, and the Allen in a new play, James O'Neill in "Monte Cristo" at the Academy, a new star or two, and any number of "Christian" companies.—Charles Alfred Byrnes in Brooklyn Citizen.
